G. H. Lewes is the ugitest man and con, and the most brilliant. Mercurial as a Frenchman, thoroughly continental in thought and expression, he makes you forget his face in fifteen minutes, and, at the end of an hour, you pronounce him one of the most interesting men you ever met. When he and his wife, "George Eliot," lead conversation, their drawing room becomes the most attractive in London. Mr. and Mrs. Lewes have a pretty house near Regent's Park, and, reserving every Sunday, collect around them the cleverest of men and women. Nothing can exceed the retiring manner of "George Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot," whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whose voice is soft and low, She Eliot, "whos LOUIS HANAUER, President.
